

LOS COYOTES REVEGETATION AND LAND RESTORATION PROJECT

PROGRAM SUMMARY

The Los Coyotes Reservation is situated on over 25,000 acres and lies next to the heart of the Cleveland National Forest and directly adjacent to the largest desert state park in the contiguous United States the Anza-Borrego Desert State Park. Los Coyotes' is a non-gaming tribe and because of its remote location tribal members have been plagued by high rates of unemployment. Operation by the tribe of a primitive campground facility open to the public provides for meager revenue to sustain its two most valuable resources, its tribal members and their land. The Los Coyotes Revegetation and Land Restoration Project will provide for activities scheduled for over 6 months duration aimed at restoring and revegetating their tribal land damaged by recent wildfire, beetle infestation and abuse incurred through misuse of the land by 4x4s of campground visitors.
